Tournament will play 5 handed

Players begin with 10,000 starting chips

Players are paid out a maximum of what they currently have behind in their stack

(for example, if a player only has two points worth of chips in their stack, they will receive a maximum of two points from players no matter how many points their winning board is worth)

The top/high card board is scored first (and then the middle/2 card board, and finally the bottom/4 card board)

- if a player loses all of their chips after paying out the top (and/or middle) board then they are eliminated from the tournament, even if they have a winning middle or bottom board

A high card will be used to select which player will be moved to another table for rebalancing

If a player is not present at the conclusion of the deal, their hand is dead and they will have to pay out the required non-bonus (1, 2, 3) points to the winning player(s)

Tournament will play 5 handed

Players begin with 10,000 starting chips

Players are paid out a maximum of what they currently have behind in their stack
(for example, if a player only has two points worth of chips in their stack, they will receive a maximum of two points from players no matter how many points their winning board is worth)

The top/high card board is scored first (and then the middle/2 card board, and finally the bottom/4 card board)
- if a player loses all of their chips after paying out the top (and/or middle) board then they are eliminated from the tournament, even if they have a winning middle or bottom board

A high card will be used to select which player will be moved to another table for rebalancing
If a player is not present at the conclusion of the deal, their hand is dead and they will have to pay out the required non-bonus (1, 2, 3) points to the winning player(s)

Two boards will be run for each set/hand, after the first board is scored, it is removed and a new board is run out and scored using the same process
